In Latin, Illuminated manuscript on parchment France, likely Paris, c. 1300

i (parchment pastedown) + 299 + i (parchment pastedown), on very thin parchment, actually 301 folios, since the pastedown are part of the first and last quires, but modern foliation, 1-299, in pencil, top, outer corner recto, original medieval foliation, top margin, in red and blue decorative roman numerals, I-CCXCIII, beginning on f. 8, and continuing through f. 296, (collation, i⁸ [1, front pastedown] ii¹² [beginning f. 8] iii-iv¹² v¹⁰ vi-xiv¹² xv¹⁰ xvi-xviii¹² xix¹² [-1, before f. 208, with loss of text] xx-xxiv¹² xv¹² [-1, before f. 279, with loss of text] xvi¹² [11, back pastedown; -12, cancelled]), horizontal catchwords, bottom, inside margin, sometimes boxed, ad hoc signatures in most quires, with various systems of letters or roman numerals designating the leaves, and marks indicating the quire, very bottom, outer margin, recto, in the first half of the quire, and "x," on the first leaf of the second half, in red ink or lead, copied below the top line in a very regular, controlled gothic bookhand in black to chestnut ink in twenty-six long lines, ruled in lead with the top and bottom rules full across, and with double full-length vertical bounding lines, prickings in top and bottom margin, and a single pricking, outer margin, aligned with the top ruled line, (justification 103-102 x 74-72 mm.), guide notes in lead, usually in top margin, for medieval foliation, majuscules within the text stroked in red, red underlining within the text, red rubrics and paragraph marks, original foliation, top margin, in red and blue roman numerals, three- to two-line alternately red and blue initials, with pen flourishes in the opposite color, extending into full-column borders of red and blue decorative "J's", f. 8, three-line white-highlighted pink initial, on blue and gold ground, infilled with realistic leaves on gold, extending into a red and blue lobed-border which frames the text on three sides, and extends into the fourth, terminating in leaves, in excellent condition. Bound in the later fourteenth or fifteenth-century in fairly heavy wooden boards, square, and cut flush with the text-block, covered with white alum-tawed skin, spine with two double raised bands, once fastened front to back, front cover, remains of strap, in excellent condition structurally, surface of covers and spine worn. Dimensions 150 x 113 mm.

This is a deluxe copy in an early binding of a very important collection of fifty-one sermons, most likely preached at the University of Paris, or by preachers associated with the University, in the thirteenth century. Whereas half the sermons are known from other manuscripts, another half are unrecorded sermons from the same milieu. They thus represent a very important addition to our corpus of thirteenth-century sermons. Thirteenth-century sermon manuscripts are quite uncommon on the market with the Schoenberg Database recording only five.

PROVENANCE

1. The style of decoration, parchment, and layout suggest that this manuscript was copied in Paris around 1300 in the context of the professional booktrade. This is confirmed by its contents, which include numerous sermons identified in manuscripts containing sermons preached at the University of Paris in the thirteenth century. It was copied by a number of scribes, using similar skilled gothic bookhands; the hand of the first scribe in particular is more rounded than one might expect, suggesting that he may have been a scribe from outside Paris, not an unusual occurrence. The relatively deluxe make-up is quite unusual for sermon manuscripts. Likely original owners could be either a University Master or even a cleric trained in Paris and working elsewhere, presumably someone of some wealth and position in the Church.

2. f. 8, bottom margin, in an early modern hand, "173."

TEXT

Front pastedown-f. 5v, incipit, "//et nouem dimissi sunt et dispersi sunt in terra ...; Ex testimonio beniamin, Osculans filios dicit, sicut ysaac est anno natus est ...; f. 296v-back pastedown, incipit, "Qui credit in illum non confundetur, ad rom. x, verbi primo nobis ...";

Two texts added to the manuscript in a cursive gothic script, probably in the later fourteenth or fifteenth century; the first text may be an unidentified commentary on Genesis, the second text, an unidentified sermon.

This is an important collection of thirteenth-century sermons, most likely consisting of sermons preached at the University of Paris, or by university masters, between c. 1230 and 1300, or a little later, when the manuscript was copied. The revival of medieval preaching, dating from the later years of the twelfth century, was one of the most important features of the history of the Church in the thirteenth century. This is reflected both in a notable increase in the number of sermons that are preserved in manuscripts, and in a change in the form of the sermon. The sermons included in this manuscript are examples of the new "modern" or "school" sermons (also called "university" and "scholastic" sermons). In contrast to earlier medieval sermons, the new modern sermons begin with a theme (thema), usually a verse from Scripture, which becomes not only the focus of the content of the sermon, but also the source of its structure. The structure of the sermon is typically announced at the beginning, and each part, or division, is supported by citations from scripture. Around 1230, preachers begin to introduce their sermons with a "protheme," essentially a very brief introductory sermon, often invoking divine aid. Many of the sermons in this collection include a protheme.

Preaching was an integral part of the life of the thirteenth-century University. Masters in theology were expected to preach both to university audiences on major feast days and to lay audiences. The sermons in this manuscript are clearly from this milieu. The manuscript includes fifty-one sermons. Twenty-six of these are found in Schneyer's Repertorium der lateinischen Sermones des Mittelalters für die Zeit von 1150-1350. Sixteen of the sermons listed in Schneyer are also found in other manuscripts of collections of sermons from the University of Paris: Rouen, Bibliothèque municipale MS A.560, includes twelve of the same sermons, and some of the same sermons can also be found in Laon, Bib. mun. MS 289, Poitiers, Bib. mun., MS 99, and Troyes, Bib. mun. MS 1964. The authors of the few sermons that can be attributed by name were Parisian theologians, or studied in Paris, including two sermons by St. Bonaventure, O.F.M. (d. 1274), as well as sermons by Thomas de Lisle, O.P. (d. 1322), Jacobus de Losanne, O.P. (d. 1322), Bartholomaeus de Bononia, O.F.M. (d. 1294), Aegidius de Valle Scholarum (d. 1267/8), Eberhard de Valle Scholarum (d. 1272), and Guillaume de Malliaco, O.P. (d. c.1300). Alongside sermons that were probably preached to a university, clerical audience, the manuscript also includes sermons that were preached to the laity, and begin with references to sayings in French ("vulgariter dicitur"). The twenty-five sermons included in this manuscript that are not included in Schneyer are most likely unrecorded sermons from thirteenth-century Paris, associated with the University. They represent an important addition to our corpus of thirteenth-century sermons, and they thus deserve careful study.

Thirteenth-century sermon manuscripts are very uncommon on the market. For example, the Schoenberg Database lists only five; this manuscript represents a rare opportunity to acquire a very important text.

ILLUMINATION

The first sermon in the manuscript, now f. 8, begins with a formal illuminated initial; the three-line initial is pink, with white highlights, on a blue and gold ground, infilled with realistic leaves on gold, extending into a red, blue and gold frame, which continues into the top, bottom and partly into the outer margins; the corners of the frame are deeply lobed, orange, gold, and pale violet tri-lobe leaves branch from the frame. The quality of the initial points to a professional shop in Paris, c. 1300; for book production at this time in Paris, see Joan Diamond Udvitch. "Manufacture and Market in Parisian Book Illumination around 1300," Europäische Kunst um 1300, eds. E. Schmidt and E. Liskar, Akten des XXV. Internationaler Kongress für Kunstgeschichte 6, Vienna, 1986, pp. 101-110. A similar, if more elaborate initial, is found in Paris, BnF, MS lat. 8504, dated 1313-1314, illustrated in Richard H. and Mary A. Rouse. Manuscripts and their Makers: Commercial Book Producers in Medieval Paris 1200-1500, Turnhout, Belgium, vol. 2, pl. 71.
