Printed Book of Hours (Use of Paris)

In French and Latin, printed on paper,

Paris, Yolande Bonhomme, March 16, 1549 (dated colophons)

With 58 large metalcuts, Kerver's printer's device (printed twice), and 32 small metalcuts by Jean Pichore and the Master of the Très Petites Heures of Anne de Bretagne (Jean d'Ypres)

In-8° format, ii + 224 + ii unnumbered paper leaves, no visible watermark, complete, 28 quires (collation a-z8, A8, A-B8, aa-bb8), leaves in quires a-z include printed folio numbers, signed in the first half of each quire with either a minuscule or majuscule letter, followed by a roman numeral (no signature on titlepage), (justification, text ruled in brown ink c. 127 x 74 mm.), printed in black ink in a type resembling Gothic bastarda script on 24 lines, 1- to 2-line initials, rubrics and captions in decorated borders printed in red, Kerver's unicorn printer's device printed twice (sig. a1 and bb8v), 32 SMALL METALCUTS, 58 LARGE METALCUTS (mostly 19 line, one repeat, c. 110 x 75 mm), tips of upper outer corners to opening few leaves neatly repaired, soiling to title and final leaf, a few occasional smudges. Bound in modern red morocco, spine with five raised bands, "Heures" and "1549" tooled in black on spine, some light wear, spine fading very slightly, otherwise in very good condition. Dimensions 170 x 110 mm.

This attractive, profusely illustrated, and unrecorded Parisian Book of Hours was printed by the widow of Thielman Kerver, Yolande Bonhomme, who was perhaps the most successful female printer in the sixteenth century, described as "a forceful and determined woman." She believed illustration was a critical factor and this imprint employs mostly the "up to date" Renaissance prints by Jean Pichore. This imprint is important because it is the first known to us in which Yolande credits herself as the printer, without the name of her deceased husband.

PROVENANCE

1. Printed in Paris by Yolande Bonhomme, the widow of Thielman Kerver, and dated March 16, 1549 in the colophon on sig. z8v (f. 184v), "ian mil.v.c.xlix le xvi jour de mars"; the date 1549 also appears on the title page, sig. a1, on sig. B4v (f. 204v), and at the end, on sig. bb8v (f. 224v), "M.d.xliv."
2. Belonged to Albert Ehrman (1890-1969), a diamond merchant who created the Broxbourne library in his home in Hertfordshire, whose armorial bookplate, with the motto, "Pro Viribus Summis Contendo," is found inside the front cover. A note from Ehrman reading "Horae on paper are uncommon," appears on the front flyleaf, f. i. A pale blue stamp with Ehrman's initials, inside back cover. Ehrman dated the start of his collection to "shortly after the end of the First World War, when we were living [...] at Broxbourne in Hertfordshire." In 1978, part of the collection was presented to the Bodleian Library, through the Friends of the National Libraries, by John Ehrman, and is now known as the "Broxbourne Collection." Ehrman wrote about his collection in the 1954 edition of The Book Collector, "Contemporary Collectors."

3. Inside back cover, in ink, "<5?>29," changed to "1729."

Yolande Bonhomme continued the highly successful publishing enterprise established by her husband, Thielman Kerver (active 1497-1522), after his death in 1522 and until 1557. During this period of thirty-five years, she published two hundred titles. Thielman Kerver, who was originally from Coblentz in Germany, had become particularly well known for his Books of Hours, of which he published 124 editions between 1497 and 1522. When Thielman married Yolande, around the time he began printing in Paris in 1497, he entered an old Parisian bookselling family, whose roots in bookselling can be traced back to the fourteenth century (Beech, 1985, p. 80).

Yolande printed liturgical books for Paris and for numerous provincial French cities, but also for the international market, especially in the 1520s and 1530s. She considered the illustration of prime importance, stating in a 1533 Book of Hours that it contains pictures which please everybody (Lacombe, 1907, p. LXXXIII). The size of her printing business was important: she possessed five presses and probably employed between fifteen and twenty-five workers and apprentices (Beech, 1985, p. 84). Her inspiring career leading a large publishing house has been studied by Beatrice Beech, who describes Yolande as "a forceful and determined woman who not only directed a complex firm but who diligently pursued her debtors, took risks, made money, and invested it" (Beech, 1985, p. 89). Yolande Bonhomme was not unusual in her role, because some fifty widows who ran Parisian publishing houses in the sixteenth century have been identified, although she was probably the most successful (cf. Beech, 1985, pp. 79, 90).

It is interesting to note that Yolande retained her deceased husband's device and usually identified herself simply as the widow of Thielmann Kerver. By 1534, she occasionally names herself along with her husband, as in a 1534 imprint of the Bible, "... yolande bonhomme vidue spectabilis viri Thielmanni Kerver ..." (Oxford, Bodleian Library, Tanner 158). In a Breviary in 1551, nearly three decades after her husband's death, she credits herself in the device, omitting Kerver's name: "... apud Yolanda Bonhomme in Jacobea ..." (Oxford, Bodleian Library, Antiq.g.F.1551.1) (compare figs. 1, 2, and ill.). However, in the second of the three colophons on f. 204v (sig. B4v) in our imprint, Yolande credits herself alone, thus (to our knowledge) making it the earliest known example of her explicitly crediting herself by name instead of as the "widow" of her deceased husband.

Under Yolande Bonhomme's direction the Kerver publishing house continued producing work of distinctive quality, characterized both by the superior quality of the blocks and presswork. The 1525 edition is a fine example of the craftsmanship, using metalcuts by two artists in two different styles. A few incunable cuts by the Master of the Très Petites Heures of Anne de Bretagne are still in use, through which the edition continues the tradition of the very earliest printed Books of Hours. In addition to these, the 1525 edition contains the last set of cuts produced by Kerver's workshop for Books of Hours, realized in 1519 after designs by Jean Pichore. Our copy is not hand-colored, thus revealing the fine engravings at their best.

The Master of the Très Petites Heures of Anne de Bretagne is known by many other names in the literature, including the Master of the Apocalypse Rose of the Sainte-Chapelle, the Master of the Chasse à la licorne, the Master of the Life of Saint John the Baptist, and is now considered identical with the painter Jean d'Ypres. He worked in numerous media, including painted altarpieces, stained glass windows, designs for tapestries, illuminated manuscripts (his eponymous Book of Hours is Paris, BnF, NAL 1320 of 1498), and designs for woodcuts. His style, as well as his repertory of models, establishes him as the artistic heir of the Master of Coëtivy, possibly identical with the painter, Colin d'Ypres (active 1450-1485). The documented career of Jean d'Ypres from c. 1490 to 1508 corresponds with that of the Master of the Très Petites Heures of Anne de Bretagne. The volume and diversity of his artistic production in the international arena of the Parisian art market at the beginning of print culture suggest a flourishing workshop rather than a lone individual.

Most of the remaining metalcuts in this book were designed by the workshop of Jean Pichore. Although Pichore was mainly an illuminator and the head of a large and productive workshop in Paris, he also designed metalcuts. Pichore was active in Paris, although Cardinal Georges d'Amboise, archbishop of Rouen was one of his major clients. He is documented as working on two manuscripts, the first volume of Augustine's De civitate Dei of c. 1501/03 and the Chants royaux for Louise of Savoy of 1517 (both in the BnF). Pichore managed a large family enterprise responsible for the illumination of a great number of classical, secular, and religious works and he played an important role in supplying "Renaissance" designs for printed Books of Hours. The new style of Pichore was adopted by Kerver (and also other printers such as Simon Vostre and the Hardouin brothers) (Tenschert and Nettekoven, 2003 and Zöhl, 2004). The calendar roundels are by a third, yet unidentified artist.

Printed Books of Hours were one of the mainstays of Parisian publishers and printers in the Renaissance; countless editions were produced between 1488 and 1568. The new technology of printing introduced Books of Hours, a prayer book for the laity, to a broader audience. Members of the growing urban middle class were eager clients for these books.
