[Passion Prayers and Devotions]

In Low German, illustrated manuscript on paper
[Germany, Lower Rhine, c. 1470]

215 folios, on paper (watermarks similar to Briquet no. 8527: Lettre P [Leiden, 1463-1469, Utrecht, 1468], Briquet no. 1482: Armoiries à 3 fasces au chef chargé de 3 croix recroisetées [Utrecht, but later paper: 1526, ff. 98-100]), collation: (i², ii⁴ (12-1) [missing folio of quire probably blank], iii², iv², v⁸ (8-2) [missing blank folio between ff. 51v-52; also missing last folio of quire, prayer incomplete], vi², vii⁹ (12-3) [3 last folios of quire were likely blank], viii², ix¹⁰, x¹⁰, xi¹⁰, xii⁴ (8-4), xiii¹¹ (12-1), xiv¹¹ (12-1), xv¹⁵ (18-3), xvi², xvii¹², xviii¹¹ (12-1), xix¹⁰, xx¹⁰, xxi³], written in a gothic hybrid (textualis with some cursive elements) script in brown ink on up to 21 long lines (justification 90 x 65 mm) in eight (?) different hands, plummet ruling, rubrics in red, some prayers entirely copied in red (ff. 155-155v), some capitals touched in red, 1 to 3-line high initials painted in bright red ink, some underlining in red ink, 4 to 7-line high initials painted in red or blue with penwork highlighted in green wash, 7 WOODCUTS PASTED IN TEXT OR FACING TEXT ON BLANK PAGE (c. 55 x 65 mm) WITH CONTEMPORARY COLORING (ff. 52v, 54v, 145v, 154v, 163v, 171v, 179). Bound in a contemporary limp dark calf binding, smooth spine, sewn on three raised thongs, in a modern cloth case (two folios detached: f. 48, f. 116, binding worn and in need of restoration, leather missing on spine with raised thongs apparent, nonetheless contemporary condition. Dimensions 130 x 100 mm.

Unpublished hybrid book in its original state with a contemporary binding, including a series of prayers and devotional exercises on the Passion written by separate scribes as short quires and illustrated with an extraordinary series of hand-colored woodcuts (some of which are unrecorded by Schreiber) related to those in a small group of manuscripts that include the so-called Gulden Puchlein. The Lower Rhenish origin of our example is uncommon, as most known manuscripts originate in southern Germany, and no other examples are recorded in private hands.

This is a collection of miscellaneous prayers and devotional exercises written in low German mostly on the Passion of Christ, one of the most important subjects of meditation from the fourteenth to the sixteenth centuries. Among manuscripts containing Passion meditations, the Hundred Articles of the Passion by the Dominican friar Henricus Suso is one of the most popular (see "Project: Meditation Practice" below). The emphasis on the Passion was one of the central tenets of the Devotio Moderna, the religious reform movement founded by Geert Groote in the fourteenth century and of which the text by Thomas à Kempis, the Imitation of Christ, is a central example (see Hyma and Post). The reform movement put its emphasis on humility in the face of Christ's suffering which could be better understood through "imitation" in the commonly spoken and understood vernacular languages. Theirs was a practical piety, inside and outside the convent. The language of the present manuscript places the manuscript in the lower Rhenish region, close to the heartland of the Devotio Moderna.

It should be noted, however, that fifteenth-century Dominican spirituality, such as that expressed at St.-Katherine's convent in Nuremberg, was profoundly influenced by the spirituality of the Devotio Moderna, and the woodcuts included in the manuscript appear to have circulated primarily in a Dominican milieu, the chief manuscript of the group being from St.-Katherine's.

ILLUSTRATION

Seven hand-colored woodcuts punctuate the main divisions of the text, as follow:

f. 52v, Arrest of Christ, ca. 57 x 58 (lacking lower part, trimmed; composition related to Schreiber 227, 228);

f. 54v, Baptism of Christ, ca. 66/67 x 53/54 (composition related to Schreiber 132);

f. 145v, Flagellation, ca. 66/67 x 56/57 (composition related to Schreiber 302, 303);

f. 154v, Ecce Homo, ca. 65/64 x 55 (composition based on Schreiber 335m, see also 336, 336a);

f. 163v, Christ before Pilate (the Handwashing), ca. 66/67 x 56 (composition based on Schreiber 283, see also 281, 282);

f. 171v, Carrying of the Cross, ca. 66 x 56/57 (composition based on Schreiber 356; see also 360);

f. 179r, The Disrobing of Christ, ca. 65 x 55 (parts of frame trimmed, but without any loss of the depicted scene; composition based on Schreiber 369, see also 368);

The manuscript contains a set of seven stylistically uniform woodcuts in versions not recorded in Schreiber. The compositions of the woodcuts are based on a series probably produced in South Germany, ca. 1440-1450 (see Field). The series is extant in as many as fifteen related Passion sets of differing extent and quality, of which the fullest is pasted into a manuscript in the Graphische Sammlung, Munich, known as the Gulden Puchlein (Golden Booklet) and made for the St.-Katherine Cloister of Nuremberg (see Weigmann, and more recently Schmidt, 1998, pp. 72-80, for a spreadsheet of extant examples, and idem, 2004, pp. 19ff and 348-53). The Gulden Puchlein, containing a miscellany of texts on the life of the Virgin and the passion of Christ, is illustrated with seventy woodcuts pasted in the text spaces left blank by the scribe: compare our f. 54v (Baptism of Christ) with GP f. 89 (Schmidt, fig. 5). Other comparisons include our f. 54v and Augsburg, Universitätsbibliothek, Cod. I.3.8° 5, f. 135v (Schmidt, fig. 32), our f. 171v (Calvary) and Nuremberg, Stadtbibliothek, MS Will II, 19.8°, f. 104 (Schmidt, fig. 66); Munich, Bay. Staatsbibliothek, Clm. 20131, f. 8 (Schmidt, fig. 115); our f. 171v and Berlin, Kupferstichkabinett, SMPK (Schmidt, fig. 197); and Munich, Bay. Staatsbibliothek, Cgm, 1126, f. 52v (Flagellation reversed). Many of these manuscripts were produced in a Dominican milieu. The woodcuts of the present set, which are hitherto unrecorded, are qualitatively finer than most of the extant versions.

Most of the woodcuts were inserted on blank pages or at the lower section of pages in unwritten areas following the conclusion of texts or text sections. The subjects of many do not correspond with the texts they accompany, and the chronological order of the Passion is not followed in the sequence. These observations could indicate that they were added only as afterthoughts to a completed manuscript. But in at least one instance (f. 179r) the woodcut was set between the conclusion of one text and the beginning of the rubric for the following one, which suggests that the scribe knew how much space to leave for the woodcut which now appears there.

According to Schmidt's estimates, there were at least fifteen different series of the lives of Christ and the Virgin in the "Gulden Puchlein" group, and it is likely that each contained different versions of the subjects. Field (in Parshall, 2005, p. 105-106) estimates a production of nearly 3,000 sets, an extraordinary number of prints, which wholly justifies Schmidt's description of the series as "the most successful cycle of woodcuts before Albrecht Durer. The present manuscript will be published in the forthcoming catalogue by P. Schmidt and R. Cermann (Katalog der deutschsprachigen illustrierten Handschriften des Mittelalters, forthcoming).
